Appel de solidarité : Cessez de détruire la Grèce !

44 députés européens issus de différents groupes politiques et membres du Progressive Caucus ont signé une déclaration de solidarité « Cessez de détruire la Grèce ! », avant le prochain Eurogroupe qui se tiendra le 7 avril.

Les députés signataires appellent rapidement à la conclusion du programme et à la fin du tout austéritaire tout en pointant du doigt la responsabilité politique des créanciers. En effet, l'image d'une Europe qui impose à un de ses États membres, pris en étau entre les intérêts contradictoires de différentes parties, une dérogation arbitraire en matière de droits sociaux ne pourra que renforcer la méfiance des citoyens à l'égard des institutions européennes.

Cette lettre a été signée par les députés européens suivants:

STOP DAMAGING GREECE

At Friday's Eurogroup meeting (7 April) the Eurozone finance ministers will discuss the second review of Greece's economic adjustment programme.

The institutions [International Monetary Fund (IMF), European Central Bank (ECB) and the European Commission] are demanding that Greece implements a reduction to the tax-free threshold, further cuts to pensions, and even greater liberalisation of labour laws. It is, therefore, clear that in spite of opposite statements, Greece is still being held hostage by the dogma of austerity.

More than one out of three (35.7 percent) of the Greek population is at risk of poverty and social exclusion and unemployment at 23%— the highest levels in the Eurozone<sup>1</sup> , whilst state spending has been cut by 31% (2009 -2014)<sup>2</sup> and yet the IMF and some member states are demanding more and more cuts.

They ask for further reductions in pensions, as they say that the Greek pension system is too generous and pensions too high. The truth is that Greece's old people are much worse off than elsewhere in Europe. 43% of pensioners receive less than 660 EUR per month, while the per capita annual income for individuals aged over 65 is about 9000 EUR compared with 20.000 in the Eurozone.

The Greek government is also forced to accept by the IMF and other institutions acting beyond their mandate, such as the ECB, a complete dismantling of collective bargaining and other labour laws on collective dismissals and trade unions protection. As also the European Commission has repeatedly underlined, this runs against European social rights law and the European social model. And while the common rhetoric is that Greece does not follow European rules, ironically it is being asked to deviate from these same rules.

But beyond the legal and normative question, the political crux is evident: The image of Europe imposing on a member state an arbitrary derogation from social rights can only reinforce citizens' disappointment in European institutions and democracy, contributing further to the Union's disintegration, in a moment that EU is facing enormous challenges within and around its borders.

We need to finally get rid of the austerity policies and instead find the strength to advocate for substantial debt relief that would pave the way for Greece's economic recovery and inclusive growth.

The concrete results from the sacrifices of the Greek people are now in danger because of damaging delays caused by the differences among the creditors and ever new demands, which jeopardize the economic and political environment both in Greece and the Eurozone.

It takes courage to argue that we're all going to benefit in the long run from strengthening each other instead of cutting the ground under our feet. To show solidarity instead of contempt. But this courage is necessary if we want to build our common future.
